

NARRM NGARRGU LIBRARY AND FAMILY SERVICES

City of Melbourne is completing works to fit-out narm ngarrgu Library and Family Services located in the heart of the Queen Victoria Market precinct at the corner of Queen and Therry streets.

The design includes a library across three levels, family and maternal health services, a rooftop terrace, a study and events space, a creative makerspace, two sound studios and bookable meeting rooms. It will also feature various artworks curated specifically for the new space.

narm ngarrgu Library and Family Services will open on Saturday 25 November.

What's been happening?

Following consultation with the community and the Wurundjeri Woi Wurrung Cultural Heritage Aboriginal Corporation, we're excited to announce the new library and community centre will be called narm ngarrgu Library and Family Services. narm ngarrgu (pronounced nahrrm narr-GUW) translates to 'Melbourne Knowledge' in Wurundjeri Woi-wurrung language.

All fit-out works, including landscaping on the rooftop terrace, are now complete. Over the next two weeks, we will be moving in the book collection and ensuring our systems are ready to go ahead of opening the library and family services centre in late November.
